

TEACHING MANAGEMENT
DOCTORAL SEMINAR ON PEDAGOGY

SYLLABUS
(Revised)

University of Virginia

The Darden Graduate School of Business Administration

Professor James G. Clawson

Spring Semester, 2011

DOCTORAL SEMINAR ON PEDAGOGY
SYLLABUS, 2011

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The main objective of the course is to prepare participants for the teaching aspects of their careers in academia by

1. Exploring theories and practicalities of adult learning.
2. Practicing course design.
3. Studying and practicing a variety of teaching techniques and approaches.
4. Gaining a greater personal appreciation of the realities of managing careers in academe.
5. Gaining a greater appreciation of the challenges and complexities in managing an academic institution.
6. Clarifying one's values and assumptions regarding education and our roles as teachers.
7. Developing a variety of teaching skills including planning, preparing, asking questions, discussion management, thinking on our feet, observing, speaking, and analyzing.
8. Generating new teaching materials on teaching.
9. Having fun doing all of the above.

This syllabus is intended to help us do these things. It is a guide, however, and will be used flexibly depending on our direction and discussion. In anticipation of the first class, think about what objectives you'd like the seminar to address, and if they are different from the above, make notes here and bring them to class for discussion.

REQUIREMENTS

Grading
Weight

Criteria

- | | |
|-----|--|
| 20% | 1. Complete a detailed faculty version of a 15 session syllabus on a course of your choosing. In your cover introduction, note the level and size of your intended audience and any other assumptions you make as you prepare the syllabus. This should be a course you plan on teaching some day soon. |
| 15% | 2. Complete a video-taped 15 minute or longer teaching exercise on a topic of your choosing. Use student and faculty feedback and your own review of the video tape to prepare a five page written evaluation of your performance including objectives for improvement. We will schedule several opportunities for doing this in the course. |
| 30% | 3. Complete a 15 page or less case on teaching. These cases should focus on teaching issues at the collegiate level. Each case should be accompanied by a complete teaching note. |
| 20% | 4. Be an active contributor to your classmates' learning in class. |
| 15% | 5. Submit copies of your developmental notes for each class session of the course including outlines of what went well and what needs improvement. See the bottom section of each class page of this syllabus. |

Paper due dates will be announced in class.
