Prof. Jack Weber

Jack Weber is Professor of Business Administration at the Darden Graduate School of Business at the University of Virginia where he teaches personal leadership, strategic thinking, and executive leadership, and is co-architect of numerous innovative, residential executive development programs, including Creating the Future: The Challenge of Transformational Leadership, Leadership for Extraordinary Performance, Leading Strategic Change, and UTC’s Senior Executive Program. In the 1990s, Darden’s leadership seminars (with Carol Weber) were periodically rated by Business Week, the Wall Street Journal, and the Financial Times as tops in the quality of teaching and impact among all university-based leadership development programs.

Dr. Jack Weber’s other academic credits include posts at the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration at Dartmouth College and the International Management Development Institute (IMD) in Lausanne, Switzerland, where he served as Visiting Professor of Business Administration. While at IMD, Weber authored a book on European executives, General Managers in Action, and for six years taught leadership in IMD’s Seminar for Senior Executives. He is also co-author of Managerial Literacy: What Today’s Managers Must Know To Succeed (Dow Jones-Irwin) & numerous case studies, and is a recipient of the 2002 Darden School award for “Exceptional Achievement in Case Writing.” His current focus is on developing executive leadership, corporate transformation, and organizational performance. Jack was educated at Yale (physics), the University of Miami (electrical engineering & computer science), and the University of California where he received the Doctor of Philosophy degree in Business Administration and Organizational Behavior from the Haas Graduate School of Business. Prior to his current career in education and management consulting, Weber held engineering & technical leadership positions with RCA and the IBM Corporation. He is a member of the Academy of Management.

Jack is also a co-founder and principal of The Cahill-Weber Group, Inc., a professional management consulting and executive education firm that serves multinational corporations and their divisions and business units. Jack and his associates work with senior executives to develop a unifying vision for their organizations and to design and deliver education and coaching which fosters the leadership, teamwork and broad-based commitment necessary to translate vision and strategies powerfully into action.

The Cahill-Weber Group, Inc. is now engaged or has completed consulting or executive development assignments with Air Products & Chemicals, American Banker’s Association, AT&T, Bank One, Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., Champion International, CGA Computers, Chesapeake Corporation, Citigroup, Data Systems Corporation, Federal Reserve Bank, Ford Motor Company, General Electric Company, Hewlett-Packard, IBM, Lawry’s Foods, Lever Brothers, Lucent Technologies/Bell Laboratories, Thomas J. Lipton, Litton/PRC, Marriott Corporation, Masland Corporation, Mayne Nickless Ltd (Australia), Metropolitan Life, Michigan National Bank, Milliken, National Australia Bank Group, National Mutual Ltd (Australia), Northrup-Grumman IT, North American Van Lines, Nestle (Switzerland), Philip Morris, Pratt & Whitney, Procter & Gamble, Reckitt & Colman plc, Royal Bank Financial Group (Canada), the SABRE Group, Sara Lee/Douwe Egberts (Netherlands), Signet Bancorp, 3M Company, UBS|PaineWebber, Unilever (UK & USA), United Technologies Corporation, and numerous other companies, financial services institutions, and governments which wish to remain anonymous.

Jack and Carol Weber have two adult children, are passionate about their relationships with family and friends and their partnership in designing and conducting executive leadership workshops. They enjoy skiing, biking vacations, and their summers in San Francisco.

bio-jw02.doc